

“Salmon fleet bunched about Cypress Point and a few at Point Pinos;
a heavy sea and northwest wind prevailed.

A boat of Japanese was swamped and the oars lost northwest of the Point.
Boat and man drifted into heavy breakers north of the station.

Two Japanese boats and diver came to look for him. The diver swam through the breakers and towed the exhausted fisherman through heavy surf.
The exhausted men were warmed and care for until restored.
The boat was secured.”
